M^{rs} Bonington presents her compliments to M^r Boissonade and returns him many thanks for the loan of M^{rs} Opie's Father & Daughter; it is a simple but touching story, much too true in in many circumstances; the union of the poor man's Father with his Daughter is improbable, but not impossible. — However the Object of the author is to guard against seduction the weaker sex by the more powerful sex; her motives are virtuous and noble even by the attempt only and as by her pen she has saved but one credulous sister from a seducer — the good must applaud her efforts; — and the high literary Critic will suspend his severer judgment on the style of the work and its graphic errors for the benevolent contemplation of its moral Utility.
