This is a historical Chinese map titled "Jinglu Tu" (Jinglu Map), which is a reproduction of a map from the Kangnido (Koryŏdo) series. The map depicts a fortified city with a circular wall. Inside the wall, there is a central mountainous area with a large building, likely the palace. The city is surrounded by a river or a moat. The map includes labels for various locations and a compass rose. The title "靖盧圖" (Jinglu Tu) is written in the top right corner. The map is oriented with North at the top, as indicated by the compass rose and the label "北" (North) on the left side. The map is a historical document, likely from the 15th or 16th century, and is a valuable source of information about the geography and politics of the region.
